

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

[0080] Shared memory provides buffering and switching for all frames that flow through a fibre channel switch. Received frames are written to shared memory by the receiving port then read from shared memory by the transmitting port. Shared memory provides for data to be written to a buffer at one rate, and read from a buffer at a different rate, or vice versa.